The Devalued Dollar

Whatever the temporary benefits achieved by the recent ten per cent devaluation of the dollar and however necessary that devaluation, the people of the United States can find little consolation in the grim fact that their currency was forced to be reduced in value—in comparison to other currencies—for the second time in fifteen months.

While it is true that U.S. exports will now sell cheaper abroad, and that exporting firms will thereby be benefitted, it's also true that every American will have to pay more for various imported goods from all over the world. And they will also pay more for everything each time they travel outside this country.

In other words, while the balance of payments fight is helped by the devaluation and while that devaluation was probably necessary, Americans will pay more in many ways as a result. We are, in effect, paying now for the many years of balance of payments deficits, overseas spending, the war in Vietnam and vast foreign aid programs—for fiscal irresponsibility.

Certainly this is not a record to be proud of, it is one which is now to cost every citizen more in everyday shopping and living. This unhappy reality should convince the majority of Americans to demand greater fiscal and spending responsibility from Congress in the future.

Letter To The Editor

Editor
Times Virginian

Dear Sir,

It is my understanding, according to a letter in the Lynchburg News on Sunday, February 18, 1973, that beginning in mid-April, the CBS Television Network will show x-rated movies at 11:00 p.m.

This type of entertainment is polluting America just as surely as the scum on the rivers and the smog in the air.

Please write and voice your disapproval to:

Mr. Charles Irland
CBS Television Network

Sincerely,

The Pastor Speaks

"NOT OF THIS WORLD."

John 17

In the 17th chapter of the Gospel of John our Lord said that his people are not of this world. His prayer in this chapter was for a special people. He declared that he prayed "not for the world but for his own. He said that his people are "not of the world" even as he was not of the world. But this is a very important distinction for there are to be found certain people who are not of the world but yet they are not Christians. We know that Christ was not of the world in nature, his virgin birth, his sinless life, etc., set him apart from the world. God's people are likewise different in that they have a new nature through the miracle of the new birth. Many think that the difference between a Christian and a worldling is merely external but rather internal. The difference is one of nature and not of mere deeds. Christians are not of the world in character. This cannot be said of many church members for they are of the world. God's true children, however, are not of the world in their very character. You may make a profession of faith but if your thoughts, habits, language and your feelings are worldly and carnal then you are of the world. God is prepared to have called Heaven, a new Heaven and a new Earth for those who are not of this world.

Comment on the International Sunday School lesson for Sunday, March 4, 1973

THIS IS GOD'S WORLD

Scripture: Genesis 1:1-26, 31; Psalm 24:1-2; Psalm 104:24-30

The earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof.
the world and those who dwell therein. Psalm 24:1

In the theology of the Judaeo-Christian tradition God is the creative and sustaining force in all the universe. To describe God as a force is not to deny His personhood. In this theology, God is not only thought into being the universe, set the heavenly bodies in their orbits, brought into being plant and animal life, both marine and terrestrial on this planet at least, and sustains us and crowns His creative work brought into being by creating man in His image and endowed with remarkable capabilities which we know as man.

Judaeo-Christian theology did not arrive at these conclusions through the usual processes through which man acquires knowledge. Man's continuing search for knowledge, through ways in which he is accustomed to learn, of his own origins and of the origins of the planet which is his home, descriptively called "spaceship earth" by Barbara Ward, and of the universe of which earth is a member, is evidence that we have as yet no satisfactory scientific information about these origins. One of the motivations which sent man on his most astounding exploration yet was to see if the moon would yield any secrets about the origin and development of the universe.

The basis for these conclusions of Judaeo-Christian theology about origins is to be found in the process we call revelation. It is a unique way the Scriptures built are and contain God's revelation of Himself. It is the record in Scriptural presentation of the universe and all that is in it as God's creative work of revelation. The profoundest truths in theology were brought revelation as when that disciple acknowledged Him as the Christ, the Son of the Living God; that he had not learned it through normal processes but that God had revealed it to him.

An ancient psalmist saw the heavens as declaring the glory of God and the firmament as showing His handiwork. Paul saw God's own time and place. John Randolph of Roanoke declared that no man could see the sun rise from the Peaks of Otter and remain an atheist. It is through the eye of the spirit that we see God in His works or even that the world about us is His work.

To all creation there is an order which suggests an intelligent mind and an omnipotent hand; the orderly movement of the stars and planets in their courses, the intricate unity of the structure of matter, the life systems of which plant and animal life are sustained, systems we label ecology, the fact of the mind in every form, all these the spiritual eye sees as the work of God.

From such a viewpoint this is God's world. From this viewpoint the psalmist declared that the earth and all that is in it belongs to God. In presenting the revelation of God as Creator, the Scriptures do not explain how God carried out the process of bringing into being all that we know as the material world. But they present the fact of all existence upon God. Who gave to it substance and form and order. The process of creation, from the formation of matter to the highest forms of life as we know them, defies the imagination. No wonder it is the inspiration of exhaustive and intensive research to learn how these things came to be and why they are as they are.

The purpose of the Scriptures in presenting the revelation of God as Creator and Sustainer of life is not an answer man's curiosity about his beginnings, but it is rather to show man his obligation to God, his need to depend upon God and to come into a proper and satisfying relationship to Him. It is to show man that without God he cannot develop his own nature completely or attain his full potential.

ACHS Spanish II Class Completes Projects

The Spanish II Class at Appomattox County High School under the competent supervision of Mrs. James Hall, Spanish teacher at ACHS, has just completed work on four week projects.

Students have worked on projects of their own choice, at their own speed and have really done a fine job, according to Mr. Hall, and a great deal of individual work has gone into the projects.

Students in the Spanish II Class are shown above with their projects which range from pictures, crossword puzzles, posters, scrapbooks, newspapers, puppet show, translation of stories, original plays, flash cards (English on one side - Spanish on the other), plans for a Fiesta, original song, fairy tales, and maps.

School administration was quite pleased with the projects and work done by the students and with the efforts of Mr. Hall in bringing about this phase of school work. They felt that recognition should be given the teacher and students and it is well deserved.

Students will now, after the completion of their projects, begin explaining their individual projects to the class and will speak in Spanish while they tell fellow students about the work involved in each project.

Who Cares?

We do, say the 2,500 volunteers working through the Virginia Skyline C.&S. Council this year. Providing services to over 16,000 Girl Scouts is a big job, but one which is not so difficult for those who care about girls. Appomattox G. S. make up one of the 100 members of the Virginia Skyline Council and are led by some 20 dedicated volunteers.

Although the most important source of counsel function is our volunteers, it takes money to train them and provide their troops with, personal services, program material, and camping equipment.

Even though past Funds Drives have failed to support the Appomattox troops entirely, the Council has not cut down on its services to our girls. In order to continue to provide a quality program, we must build up new income sources. We hope to do this through this year's Sustaining Membership Enrollment.

We ask the support of parents and friends of Girl Scouting through S.M.E. Put your trust and value in our girls by becoming a Sustaining Member.

Makes Dean's List

Mrs. Shirley C. Eye of Appomattox has been notified that she has been named to the Dean's List at Longwood College for the past semester.

In a letter received from the college, Mrs. Eye was told that her fine work was a credit to herself and to the college.
